

St Margaret's School

About St Margaret's School

St Margaret's is an independent school for girls between the ages of 4 and 16. There are 155 girls and 23 teachers in the St Margaret's family.

Like most schools, we want our girls to be happy, rounded and confident. Like most schools we want our girls to do their very best academically. We work towards reaching these goals by engaging with each girl on a personal level, something you can do when you have small classes, low teacher turnover, and a culture of involvement. Every girl stands out at St Margaret's.

We are committed to providing a secure, caring and challenging learning environment in which girls are encouraged to strive for excellence in all that they do. Respect for others lies at the heart of the school community, within which the potential and talent of each individual can be recognised, nurtured and realised. At St Margaret's education is seen as a partnership between pupils, parents and teachers.

The school has become expert at teaching girls since 1884. As we rarely advertise, almost all our girls come here through word of mouth. If you haven't arrived here through a personal recommendation, you may wish to read an independent review of the school from the current Good Schools Guide or our 2014 Inspection Report. We are understandably pleased with both but, as any current parent will tell you, there is really no substitute for coming to see us in person.
