Duties for a Non-TLR Teacher:

All teachers have responsibilities within the school, as laid out in the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document the Teachers' Standards, Parts 1 and 2 (attached to this document). As such, there are expectations of contribution which are quite reasonable from such teachers who do not hold TLR responsibility. These might include:

- Assisting to write schemes of work
- Writing assessment tasks for units of work or end of year examinations
- Producing resources for others in the department to use
- Monitoring Gifted and Talented students in the department
- Mentoring a student
- Liaising with department TAs
- Planning and leading visits

In addition, any post-threshold teachers can be asked to take on additional responsibilities as they are expected to have a) passed the threshold standards and b) be continuing to progress professionally. This might include:

- help for other teachers in the department who are requiring assistance
- developing a wide range of teaching and learning strategies
- involvement in whole school development.

All this will have to be negotiated depending on the size of the department and the number of people concerned. In all cases, Curriculum Leaders must be cognisant of the workload for each teacher. Fairness is an important factor and the workload of the teachers must be judged appropriately and particularly in comparison with any TLR post-holders in the department.

TEACHERS' STANDARDS

Preamble
Teachers make the education of their pupils their first concern and are accountable for achieving the highest possible standards in work and conduct. Teachers act with honesty and integrity; have strong subject knowledge; keep their knowledge and skills as teachers up-to-date and are self-critical; forge positive professional relationships; and work with parents in the best interests of their pupils.
