The role: Learning Support Assistant (SEND)

The Special Educational Needs and Disabilities (SEND) Team: supporting the whole school structure

At AGFS we believe that all pupils can succeed if given outstanding teaching and pastoral care. The SEND team is a crucial part of delivering both of those things.

Learning Support Assistants at AGFS are used to ensure that all pupils, no matter what their background or previous attainment, can make progress in every subject specialist lesson. You will be working with pupils one-on-one, and in small groups, to provide support to any pupils needing additional academic assistance.

Whatever your background, you will be prepared to work with students who have barriers to learning and build strong, trust-based relationships with individual young people.

The SEND team will liaise closely with the SENDCo to ensure that all pupils, including those with special educational needs, are supported to make good progress, whether that is in the classroom, in small groups or one-to-one sessions. They will also liaise closely with the Student Welfare Officers and Head(s) of School, to ensure that there is effective communication between teaching staff, parents and pupils about the academic and behavioural interventions being implemented for pupils in the school, and that discipline is proactive, through early intervention and incident-response.

AGFS places significant emphasis on the importance of relationships between pupils and staff. Working with the SEND team and your subject specialist department, Graduate Teaching Assistants will promote and further reinforce this culture. This could include working with staff to plan lessons or units or work, giving advice to teaching staff about how to support individual pupils, or leading training for other members of staff in areas of experience.
