About the role

Role Purpose & Description

The London Screen Academy is seeking a Teaching Practice Lead to cover the role during the autumn term 2025. This is a central role within the school, focused on developing and sustaining excellent classroom practice across all departments.

The Teaching Practice Lead will take a key role in leading whole-school strategies around pedagogy and planning. They will provide coaching to new and experienced teachers in order to development classroom practice, work closely with individual teachers and curriculum teams to implement effective planning and delivery models, and help to administer our programme of continuing professional development electives. This role will suit someone with a clear vision for great teaching, strong interpersonal skills, and the capacity to lead through collaboration and modelling best practice.

This is an exciting role which is at the heart of what we do at LSA. The specific responsibilities will be agreed with the right candidate, and may vary considerably depending on the experience of the appointee.

Key Reponsibilities

- Lead on the continuing design and implementation of a new T&L deep dive programme
- Coordinate and participate in lesson drop-ins for all staff
- Analyse teaching and learning data and provide support and intervention where appropriate
- Oversee T&L observations as part of our process for teacher recruitment
- Provide increased coaching and planning support for new and early-career teachers
- Oversee the 'professional studies' induction programme for new teachers
- Oversee the experience of trainee teachers such as PGCE placement students or teachers on our industry convertor programme
- Expand and manage our coaching provision for new staff across departments
- Work with teams and individuals to refine day-to-day lesson planning
- Support departments to improve the integration of Knowledge, Skills and Behaviours (KSBs) into day-to-day delivery
- Offer dedicated planning support and quality assurance for the PSHCE curriculum and delivery
- Provide support in administering our CPD Electives programme
- Design and deliver CPD Electives on pedagogy and planning

About You

We are looking for someone who is confident leading professional development, passionate about high-quality teaching, and ready to take a strategic overview of curriculum and pedagogy. This role may suit someone with senior leadership experience, or an experienced middle leader looking to gain further experience at whole-school level.

The successful candidate will be:

- Skilled at building strong, supportive relationships with colleagues
- Proactive and able to work autonomously within wider strategic frameworks
- Experienced in leading teams or projects that improve teaching and learning
- Comfortable working across systems and technologies to support whole-school aims

This is an exciting opportunity to shape teaching and learning at LSA and to work with a dynamic team of educators committed to excellence. We are open to shaping the role around the strengths and interests of the successful candidate and welcome informal conversations with anyone who is interested in finding out more.

Applying to LSA

We are committed to diversifying the screen industries and increasing the diversity of our team is an important step towards this goal. We would especially welcome applicants who are from Black, Asian or Minority Ethnic groups, who are currently under-represented in our teaching staff. We welcome applicants from all backgrounds, of any sexual or gender identity, neurodiverse applicants, adults of any age or religious belief and encourage applications from people with a disability.
