OUR HEAD OF WORLD LANGUAGES TOM JOINED US LAST YEAR AND THIS IS WHAT HE SAYS ABOUT THIS EXPERIENCE

Hi, I am Tom, Head of Cambridge English Department for Primary and Secondary and I have been working at Laude San Pedro since September 2020. I made the move to the Costa del Sol directly from the UK with no experience of Spain, Spanish or international schools. Having worked in UK schools for 10 years I decided I needed a change and sought a new life abroad. Moving during COVID restrictions wasn't as difficult as I thought and it has actually forced the Spanish authorities to streamline a lot of their processes. Laude were fantastic at sorting out all of my documentation, residency, health insurance, social security and even my bank account; at school there is always someone who knows how to help/fix/arrange whatever you need. Before moving, I had two main concerns: having a car and earning less money. With the advice from someone at school, I rented a car from the airport for 3 months quite cheaply and once I knew the area and culture a little more, it was much easier to find a car to buy; people at work have helped me the buying process, finding mechanics and negotiating with car dealerships. My next issue was salary. It is well known that salaries in Spain are lower than those in the UK however when it is compared against the cost of living here in Spain, it works out very similar - from the cost of renting, fuel and weekly shopping, it is proportional to your salary just with more sunshine.

Before moving I was in close contact with the school about where to live and they were sending me lots of apartments in San Pedro town however in the end I decided to live in Fuengirola. Being in my early 30s, single with no family, my reasons for choosing Fuengirola were simple: close to Malaga city, on the train line, beautiful beaches and it is a large town with shops, cafes, a shopping centre, cinemas etc. There are different areas of Fuengirola however what I love is that there are no 'bad' areas. From Los Boliches to Las Lagunas, each area has their own shopping streets, independent cafes and restaurants and local amenities but they all merge into Fuengirola town centre.

Fuengirola is situated in the middle between Malaga and Marbella and it is very popular with expats whilst still having a Spanish feel and atmosphere. It is approximately about 35-40min drive to school depending on which side you live. To get to school I use the A7 which is known as the coast road and it is free to drive on; it can be very busy in the mornings however in rush-hour it is usually only 40mins maximum. The other option is the AP7 which is the toll road and can be accessed at certain points, at Fuengirola and Calahonda - it is a dream to drive on with few cars but the cost of the toll changes throughout the year. You'll hear a lot of Spanish say that Fuengirola is too far to school, however for British people, the commute is very normal and I would recommend it for the lifestyle. Fuengirola lies at the end of the commuter train from Malaga city - it is approx €4 to get to the centre of Malaga and takes about 45mins - the views of the coast are stunning for the entire journey. Trains run from 6am until 12am and are very reliable - there are two stations in Fuengirola, Fuengirola town centre and Los Boliches. Around Fuengirola there are also a number of other options, for example, Calahonda, La Cala de Mijas, Riviera, Torremolinos and even Malaga - each have a different feel depending on the lifestyle you want to live. Calahonda, La Cala, Riviera are smaller mini-towns based around large urbanisations on the way to school whilst Torremolinos and Malaga are slightly further away but they are bigger in size.

Overall, I can only say that the move to Spain has only improved my lifestyle. I have made so many friends in such a short space of time and with weekend flights back to the UK, I can still see my family and friends back home whilst enjoying the sunshine and spending my evenings and weekends on the beach.
