

Meth Abeyratne
Head Boy

My name is Meth Abeyratne. I am the head boy of AAESS and am currently studying in year 13. I have been in this school for over 8 years and I believe that there are a few characteristics that we as students expect from a teacher.

You obviously need to know your subject thoroughly and be able to explain and teach it well. You will come across many bright students in our school as well as slow learner and we need you to have the patience to teach all students with different paces and levels of understanding.

Teaching a class full of students from different nationalities is a very demanding job so we also expect a good work ethic and enthusiasm in our school. I hope you can meet these expectations of our students and we hope to see you in our school.

Claire Koen
Head Girl

At Al Ain English Speaking School, we have a wide variety of different cultures and ethnicities. This allows people to interact with one another and get to know each other in a way that brings our school together in an astonishing way. Students within the school are all very supportive of one another and enjoy getting to know about each other's cultures.

Within the school, we have many dedicated teachers, who take individual students' interests and strengths into their hands, to help them to excel. They also have a deep understanding of the subject matter and share their knowledge, with passion and sensitivity.

New teachers who come into our school, will be warmly welcomed, with the knowledge that they will become part of a very supportive team.

As diligent and respectful students in Al Ain English Speaking School, we hope for new teachers to be supportive and sensitive to our diversity, dedicated to our education, knowledgeable in the subject matter and approachable to all the students.

Blythe Chapman
Head of Houses

To teach is to impart knowledge to another person(s), to educate is to give intellectual, moral, and social instruction to another person(s). At AAESS it is not teachers that the school needs, it is educators. Educators are more valuable and more impressionable within the school environment and it is imperative for the future generation to be educated not taught. All educators at AAESS strive to enlighten students in every aspect of life, albeit it maths or manners. The staff here are role models to the school and it is from these people that the students learn life lessons among class lessons.

The school is seen as a big family. As a relatively new student at AAESS, it was only a matter of minutes before I had a lifelong family made and a set of moral values imprinted within my mindset. We are always excited to see a new family member join the team and love to make them feel as welcome as possible - it is something we are taught from day one. The range of nationalities between both students and staff shows the standard of compassion and understanding each person here attains and we enjoy to celebrate each others everyday victories as much as possible. However, to work with us it is important to ensure you are an educator and not just a teacher because our futures will be in your hands.