Caring for Our Teachers During COVID-19

When the COVID-19 pandemic spread across the globe, schools were forced to close, teachers and students quarantined, and some teachers who traveled outside China were unable to return to the country where they were teaching. It was a defining moment for schools to show what degree they value their teachers. BASIS International Schools has stood out among schools in caring for our teachers!

When China's quarantines were initiated in January 2020, BASIS International Schools proactively provided our teachers priority access to healthcare, delivered food to teachers' apartments, and provided transportation to medical facilities for those with previous medical needs. Even beyond the basic temporal needs cared for, our schools provided ways to support the teachers' social and emotional well-being. Each community had different quarantine rules, and our schools customized how it met those needs by providing communications, and arranging ways for people to stay virtually connected with colleagues, family and students to continue the bonds of the school community.

When it became evident that borders were going to close, teachers received assistance in coordinating immediate flights to ensure their safe return. As teachers returned to China, they were given assistance in navigating the quarantine, and provided enhanced support to teachers and their families.

New teachers with contracts set to begin with the 2020-21 school year, and unable to enter China, the schools went beyond simply guaranteeing this year's employment contracts. The schools also provided global healthcare coverage and funding to help teachers get through the waiting time until they arrived in China to teach. Orientation training was still provided and expedited visa support granted. The clear commitment to our teachers has never been more clearly demonstrated than what we have seen through the COVID-19 pandemic.

BASIS International Schools stand committed to providing unrivaled support to our exceptional teachers; support that continues to attract great teachers for our great schools.

"I've never had a group of students that I've enjoyed so much, and these kids are not only smart and hard working, but they are funny and creative which I have not seen in my other previous schools."

-Daniel Schneider, Economics Teacher

Our Students

BASIS International Schools students have a passion for learning. We take great pride in the caliber of our students. They are high-performing and focused, yet creative and curious. They ask questions and are genuinely interested in their teachers' responses, and when offered additional time to meet with their teachers, they readily take advantage of the opportunity.

After school, many students can be found in the library reading or studying. Most of our students participate in clubs and sports, and are willing to put in the effort to complete challenging assignments. Our students set high goals, and look to their teachers to help them achieve those goals.

"These kids are so amazing. The things they can do blows your mind every day. It's amazing how quickly they pick things up because they're in this environment"

–Jennifer Meade, Head of Early Years
